

NSCA End of Year Review Criteria 2022

The following criteria will be used for the end of year review process, which will be taking place the week of January 16, 2023.

12 Gauge Classification:

- All shooters who started and ended the year in the same class and shot a minimum of 500 registered targets or more, are eligible for review.
- All shooters who shot 1,000 registered targets or more, in their ENDING class for the year, are eligible for review.
- If a shooter has accumulated LESS THAN the following required minimum number of punches in their ending class for the year and if their calculated CCFR (Current Class Finish Ratio) in their ending class for the year is greater than 0.600, the shooter will be reviewed and down classed. Number of punches earned per class, to be down classed: Master Class, less than 7 punches; AA Class – less than 4 punches; A and B Classes – less than 3 punches; C and D Classes – less than 2 punches). The CCFR is determined from the total finishes in ending class events divided by the total number of entries in ending class events for the current year (for all gauges) which can be found on the NSCA website, and in the individual shooter's information records (Shooter History).
- A shooter who has opted out of the end of year review, will not be reviewed for end of year review.
- Any international shooters will not be down classed at the end of year review.

Sub-Gauge Classification:

There will be no end of year review for sub-gauge. Shooters will remain in the same class they ended 2022 in.

Remember: A shooter who has been down classed, may refuse the down class by returning the class refusal form at the bottom of their class card.
